次の文を読んで問いに答えなさい。

Did you know that more than ten thousand wild foxes live in the city of London? Foxes tend to be out late at night or early in the morning, . However, (①) so many foxes live in this giant city of almost nine million people, not many people have even seen one of them.

Foxes live under tool sheds and porches. They live in bushes and under tree roots, and some have even been seen . A group of foxes, called a skulk, is made up of the parents and cubs, and there are often a couple of non-breeding female foxes, or vixens, also in the group. They stay in contact with each other . The size of a skulk's territory is determined by how much food there is to eat. They mark their territory with urine so that they can tell other foxes that an area is taken.

In spring, you may see cubs playing outside, (②) by fall they are old enough to take care of themselves. Most don't live long, however. Only a small number of foxes survive their first year, and the average fox lifespan is only 18 months. London is a crowded city filled with cars, buses and trucks, so most foxes die in traffic. Some foxes are also killed (③) some people consider them pests.

We may believe (④) most foxes look for food in garbage bags and dumpsters, but foxes are actually and eat just about anything. They eat rats and pigeons in the city, and they also eat food which some people leave out for them. In spring, they pull earthworms out of the ground, sometimes . Later in summer, foxes enjoy beetles and bugs, and they favor wild berries in autumn.
